Owners in danger of losing strike insurance

major league baseball strike entered Day 14 today with the players association due to respond to new free-agent compensation proposals from the owners — and the owners in danger of losing their projected $50 million in strike insurance.

The first face-to-face bargaining sessions in five days broke up after less than two hours Wednesday as a grim-visaged Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies, the National League player representative, termed the proposals "insignificant" while management expressed its displeasure with Boone's remarks.

In Philadelphia, Common Pleas Judge Stanley M. Greenberg issued a temporary injunction blocking Lloyds of London from paying out any of the strike insurance the owners were to begin collecting Wednesday. Richie Phillips, the attorney for major league umpires, said the order was issued pending a hearing Friday on a The owners threw the ball

NEW YORK (AP) — The class-action suit filed by the umpires' union, which accuses the owners of bad-faith bargining, partly because of the existence of the insurance policy.

The 26 major league owners paid Lloyds $2 million for insurance that would pay each $100,000 per date lost to the players' strike for approximately seven weeks after the cancellation of the 153 games. The 153rd cancellation in the 13-day old strike took place Wednesday.

Phillips said the suit was filed on behalf of the umpires and persons "similarly situated, namely those individuals or groups having contractual relations with major league baseball . . . municipalities, players, vendors, concessionaires

. It's our feeling that the million-dollars plus a day the owners will receive from the insurance provides incentives and encouragement to continue the pattern of refusing to bargain to gain a full settlement of the dispute."

back to the players when the chief management negotiator, Ray Grebey, director of the Player Relations Committee, said that "the burden of movement at this point in time rests with the players association; they called the strike."

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett said both sides would meet again today — "We're shooting for 11 a.m." — but it appeared likely that the players would reject the owners' new proposals which, among other things, would limit the number of "ranking" free agents in the re-entry draft requiring a major league player as compensation to no more than 14 in any one year.

The new alternatives also would reduce the percentage of free agents who would qualify as "ranking" under certain specified performance criteria and would thereby require more than the current amateur draft choice as com-

Although Moffett described Wednesday's meetings as "businesslike," Boone termed the new compensation proposals - and compensation for free agents lost through the re-entry draft is the sole issue in the major league baseball's first in-sn strike - "not fundamentally different from the proposals which have been on the table for some time. Grebey expressed resentment at Boone's remarks, calling it an "unfair" characterization of the owners' latest move. "To get a reaction that this is minor and insignificant..." he said, his voice trailing off.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association. was again absent from the latest negotiations, as he has been since the strike began. Boone was joined by Baltimore's Mark Belanger. Cincinnati's Tom Seaver. Rusty Staub of the New York Mets, Bobby Murcer of the New York Yankees and Donald Fehr, general counsel to the union.
